30th Annual FCBA Foundation Golf Tournament

The 30th Annual FCBA Foundation Robert Emmet Lee Memorial Golf Tournament was held on Tuesday, June 23 at Westfields Golf Club. The Tournament raised nearly $7,600 for the FCBA Foundation's scholarship and internship stipend programs! The tournament is named in memory of former Federal Communications Commission (FCC)

Chairman Robert Emmet Lee, who passed away in April 1993 after serving at the FCC for almost 30 years.

We had eight teams compete for the vaunted Eagle Cup Trophy. Unseating the 2024 championship team from Davis

PRESIDENT'S Message

DEAR FCBA –

I learned last week of the untimely passing of Anisa Latif Green, a vibrant FCBA leader and a cherished friend to so many of us. I write this month's column to honor Anisa's memory, with deepest sympathy for her loved ones, her AT&T and FCBA colleagues, and all whose lives she touched.

A gifted communicator and public policy professional who prioritized mentorship and service, Anisa was extraordinary. A bright light. The real deal.

Anisa left an indelible mark on the FCBA, bringing talent, energy, and joie de vivre to the leadership roles in which she served, including Co-Chair of both the FCBA Foundation and, most recently, the TMT Law and Policy Pipeline Committee. And, of course, Anisa was instrumental in the success of the Annual Seminar and the YLC Charity Auction for many years. In a moving remembrance, Anisa's Pipeline Committee colleagues write that she "celebrated every student accepted into the Program, every graduate, every instructor and mentor who volunteered, and every employer who chose to invest in the next generation of leaders. She believed that creating opportunities for others was work worth doing, and she gave generously of herself to make that happen."

This is an unfathomable loss.

Thank you, Anisa, for all that you gave to the FCBA and our community. We will miss you more than I can express.

Jeffrey Gee

By: Laura Phillips

Jeff Gee has been around telecom for quite a while. I first met him when he was an associate at Dow, Lohnes & Albertson, a former DC telecom firm where I also worked back in the day. Jeff is currently a partner at Wilkinson Barker Knauer (WBK) where he works on a variety of matters involving media and telecommunications law, policy, and regulation. He helps telecommunications and media clients respond to government inquiries and investigations and other enforcement-related issues. Jeff also works with media companies on regulatory and compliance matters and assists media and telecom companies and investors with regulatory issues arising out of corporate transactions. I was delighted we had the chance to catch up this month and have a wide-ranging discussion focusing on his experiences and perspectives on a career and life.

Q: What attracted you to the field of communications?

A: As an undergrad at Syracuse University I triple majored in Policy Studies, Political Science, and Writing for Television, Radio, and Film. I was a policy and government student from the beginning but I stumbled into making silly television shows with the student-run television station, which drew me into media and communications. That makes it seem like I intended to go into communications law from the start but I actually didn't learn about the field until after my second year of law school. Once I did, however, it felt like a perfect fit. And it pretty much has been. While some of my classmates went on to Hollywood careers, I've been very fortunate to find my place in the communications bar.

Q: Tell us about the various places you've worked through the years.

A: Prior to joining WBK, I was with the FCC's Enforcement Bureau for over a decade. It was great opportunity to experience the real breadth of communications law because the work ranged across all of the industries regulated by the FCC. I had the privilege of working with a talented team of people on an enormous variety of cases, including broadcast matters, Universal Service Fund issues, auction rules, consumer protection issues, and merger conditions.

We also served as the FCC's trial staff for administrative hearings.

One of the best things about having such a broad portfolio was routinely working with all of the other bureaus in the agency and seeing firsthand the depth of knowledge and experience in each bureau and office. Before joining the FCC, I was in private practice with two different DC area communications law firms. I was lucky to work with and learn from a lot of smart and experienced lawyers at both firms.

Q: Have things unfolded in your career more or less the way you planned?

A: It's very kind of you to assume there was a plan. It's easy to look backwards and see how one opportunity led to another but, for better or worse, I've tended to pursue the work I found most interesting at the time rather than following a specific career plan. There has never been a glorious five-year plan that has guided my steps. Luckily, it seems to be working out alright. At the very least, it's never been boring.

Q: What's the most interesting or challenging thing that you've done in your current position?

A: We live in interesting and challenging times, don't we? There have been so many foundational shifts over the past few years and the hits keep coming. The pandemic changed the way we work, the media and telecom landscapes continue to shift, Loper Bright and other cases are revamping our legal thinking, and we're all adopting and/or adapting to AI in one way or another. Just keeping up with the pace of change can be challenging but it's also what keeps things interesting.

Q: Is or was there something interesting or someone who surprised or impressed you during your career and why?

A: Moving from private practice to government, I was hugely impressed with the number of people who had dedicated their careers to public service. I met so many attorneys and engineers at the FCC that were devoted public servants and deep subject matter experts and genuinely dedicated to finding solutions that served the public interest. The other thing about moving to the government after having been in private practice for well over a decade was having to learn how to practice as a lawyer within government. While the fundamentals are the same, you can't assume there is no learning curve!

Q: What do you enjoy reading?

A: My reading list moves a lot between mysteries, science fiction, fantasy, and histories ... standard nerd fare. Recently, I've enjoyed The Captive's War series by James S.A. Corey, The Divide series by J.S. Dewes, The Blacktongue Thief and The Daughters' War by Christopher Buehlman, and 1929 by Andrew Ross Sorkin. At the urging of several friends, I've started Dungeon Crawler Carl by Matt Dinniman. We'll see if I'm up for the seven (and counting) additional books in that series.

Q: Is there something (a hobby or other tidbit) people don't know about you that you are willing to share?

A: It's not a surprise to anyone that knows me, but I'm a huge theater fan. DC is a fantastic place if you love theater. The theater community here is so rich and varied that there's always something worth seeing. For classical works, we've got two great theaters, Shakespeare Theatre Company and The Folger. Woolly Mammoth Theatre Company, Studio Theatre, and Round House Theatre all do a mix of contemporary and new works. Signature Theatre is best known for musicals (their current production of Pippin is the best I've seen) but they also produce outstanding plays. If you have kids, you should be going to Imagination Stage and Adventure Theater. All of the "big" theaters in DC do great work but I think one of the hidden gems of DC is the community of small and independent theater companies. Groups like Rorschach Theatre, We Happy Few, Prometheus Theatre, Happenstance Theater, Theater Alliance, and Monumental Theatre Company constantly produce challenging and engaging new work all over the DC area. Go see live theater!

Q: Can you share your perspective on the pitfalls to avoid or other career advice for those who are just getting started in the communications field?

A: It's not particularly insightful but the best advice I've received is to do great work, every time, all the time. There's a huge amount that's out of your control, particularly as a new attorney. But you can immediately take ownership of your own work product. Even if the project you've been given seems small or uninteresting, people notice great work, which generally leads to bigger and more interesting projects. None of the people I've dealt with over my career who seemed to be effortlessly impressive got that way by avoiding doing the hard work of learning and continuing to learn.

In thinking about this, I recall Dow Lohnes' Managing Member, Bill Perry, at the first meeting of the first-year associates remarking that "legal expertise is arduously obtained and arduously maintained." That has stuck with me. I've seen people take many different paths to successful and rewarding careers but all of them start from a base of doing great work and never assuming that they know everything there is to know.

Q: Has your life changed as a result of COVID-19?

A: The pandemic showed that we can work from anywhere but I've really appreciated returning to the office. We get a lot of our best ideas from spontaneous in person interactions at the coffee maker or bumping into people in the hallways. That doesn't happen when everyone is working from home every day. It didn't happen at my house, anyway.

Q: How long have you been an FCBA member, and what to you is the value of FCBA membership?

A: I've been an FCBA member for twenty eight years. It's a unique organization that's as much of a community as it is a professional association. As great as the CLE programming is (and it is great), the ability to create and maintain connections with folks working at different firms, in government, and within the industries we serve is irreplaceable. Those connections can make a big difference in how we do our jobs. It's much easier and more effective to contact someone you've worked with on a CLE or the Charity Auction to compare notes on an issue versus a cold call to someone who is just a name on a website. There are many opportunities over time to be mentored or to mentor others, which is itself rewarding. Membership and participation in the FCBA offers a wide range of benefits you really can't quantify.

Associate General Counsel, Regulatory – SiriusXM is seeking an experienced regulatory attorney to serve as a strategic legal advisor on Federal Communications Commission (FCC) matters impacting its satellite radio, spectrum, wireless, and communications businesses. Reporting to the SVP, Regulatory Counsel, this role will help shape and execute the company's regulatory strategy, represent SiriusXM before the FCC and industry stakeholders, and provide legal guidance on licensing, compliance, and emerging communications issues.

The Associate General Counsel will partner closely with Legal, Engineering, Product, Business Development, and Sales teams to navigate complex regulatory challenges, assess risk, and support business initiatives. Responsibilities include managing SiriusXM's FCC license portfolio, preparing and overseeing regulatory filings, advising on spectrum use and interference matters, ensuring compliance with FCC requirements, and monitoring legislative and regulatory developments that may impact the business.

This highly visible role requires a business-oriented attorney who can translate complex regulatory issues into practical advice for senior leadership while serving as a trusted representative of the company with regulators, trade associations, and industry partners.

Qualifications:

- JD and active bar membership in a U.S. jurisdiction.
- Approximately 8+ years of experience in communications law, gained at a law firm, the FCC, or an in-house legal department.
- Strong background in FCC practice and procedure, with expertise in areas such as satellite communications, spectrum management, wireless, broadcast, and subscription services.
- Experience working on engineering-adjacent regulatory issues, including interference and coordination matters.
- Excellent communication, relationship-building, and stakeholder management skills.
- Ability to provide strategic, actionable guidance to executives and cross-functional teams.

- Familiarity with AI and automation tools such as ChatGPT, Gemini, or similar technologies.

This position is ideal for a seasoned communications attorney who enjoys working at the intersection of law, technology, engineering, and business strategy while helping shape the future of audio entertainment and connected services.

City Attorney (Franklin, Virginia) – The City Council of the City of Franklin, Virginia is looking to attract a new City Attorney to be part of its leadership team and who understands the Big Picture. The City Attorney is appointed by the Council, and advises City Council on various municipal legal matters, yet works closely with the City Manager, the Administration, and a number of other stakeholders on a multitude of issues. We are seeking an experienced, professional attorney with previous experience working in a municipal setting or can demonstrate relatable experience while in the private or non-profit sectors.

The Franklin City Council is presently working with its new City Manager around the Council's priorities, and those priorities will have an impact on the direction the City will be headed in the short-term thru long-term. The new City Attorney will play a vital role in that effort. Ideally, the Council would like (in addition to experience listed above) to consider those who have practiced law in the Commonwealth of Virginia, and have been exposed to land use, development, public education, economic development, transportation matters, utilities and/or power companies, litigation, to name a few in their previous legal work portfolio. More detailed information can be obtained at: City Attorney Recruitment \(https://franklinva.gov/government/departments_h-z/human_resources/city_attorney_recruitment.php\).

Qualified candidates are encouraged to submit a cover letter/letter of interest, resume, along with salary expectations and professional references, to the Franklin City Clerk listed below. While the position is open until filled, priority consideration will be given to those that apply by July 31, 2026.
